Public speaking coach Kate DeVore says that
when public speaking,
it is essential that you
stand or sit with your back straight. This makes your voice
stronger and more clear by not only
allowing you to breathe deeper, but also making you look more confident.

Speaking With Confidence. Of course, you only want to speak
with authority when you actually have authority. If you start ordering your friends
around, you will soon find yourself without friends. (However, note that if anyone -- even a friend -- is not
respecting your boundaries, you should use a tone of authority
